Five students from Delaware State University traveled to South Georgia Aug. 16-18 as part of the Dreamers Tour, sponsored by the General Board of Church and Society. Cordele First UMC, Cairo First UMC (United Methodist Men's Rally), Vashti Center in Thomasville, and Casa de Vida y Paz UMC in Bainbridge all hosted these students. They shared their inspirational stories of living out their dreams of a better future and as contributing citizens to their communities because of the Dreamers scholarships. Their personal stories were of joys, hopes, and fears about college education, financial stability, and the desire to make a living wage to help their families, with parents earning less-than-living wages. Other issues discussed were race, culture, and areas of exploitation and discrimination of the immigrant population. While tears of despair and tears of hope were shed, each session ended with prayer. From these conversations, materials will be developed from Church and Society to help those in need.
